

QEH encourages open house concept

KOTA KINABALU: The Hari Raya open house concept is not only the best platform to foster close ties among people but also the best to enhance interaction among staff, especially when it comes to huge departments with a diverse organisational structure.

Queen Elizabeth Hospital (QEH) Deputy Director (Clinical 1), Dr Yogendra Panchalingam, said the practice of gathering all staff from various services including the management and support groups during festive celebrations such as Hari Raya will benefit the organisation.

“Such gatherings will not only allow us to enjoy various dishes but more important is that we can interact and cultivate family ties between staff,” he said, adding that it will undoubtedly influence the agenda in improving the quality of hospitals' delivery and services.

He said this at the hospital's Hari Raya celebration organised by the Persatuan Kebajikan Islam Perubatan Sabah (Perkips), here, on Thursday.

“Take the opportunity to get acquainted with and enjoy the food, but make sure that we always stick to the balanced nutrition practices because good health enables us to be fit and continue to work more efficiently,” he said.

Almost all hospital staff including those from the clinical department, clinical support and management attended the ceremony.

Meanwhile, Perkips Chairman Dr Ahmad Toha Samsuddin said the ceremony received good support thanks to cooperation from all parties.

Also present were the hospital's Deputy Management Division Director Jasawati Jasmin and Deputy Director (Clinical II) Dr Irene Chau among others.
